It's a Good Time to be a Member of the Law League

At the Consumer Law of America (CLA) meeting in Chicago in April, the conference “It’s a good time to be a member of the law league” was delivered by our immediate past-president, Mark Glazier, and our immediate past-president, Peter B. Thomas. Both sessions were held using the phrase “It’s a good time to be a member of the law league” in a professional setting, but the message was not based on any facts or logic. Instead, the message was: “It’s a good time to be a member of the law league because you can do anything, anywhere.”

Although attendance at the conference was down (at least with respect to trade shows) in all the data, there was a common theme among attendees of the conference that we had a good time in Chicago. The attendees enjoyed the presentations and discussions, and several of them expressed a desire to continue the discussions. One attendee said, “It’s a good time to be a member of the law league because you can do anything, anywhere.”

Catching our eye among the gathering crowd was the Law League Family, who attended the NALEO convention in Miami last month.

The general feeling among the collection industry’s professional body was that it was a good time to be a member of the Law League. It was a good time to be a member of the Law League. It was a good time to be a member of the Law League.

We were there for a few hours at the conference. We’re not sure we had a good time, but we had an enjoyable experience. One attendee said, “It’s a good time to be a member of the Law League because you can do anything, anywhere.”

What Springsteen Can Teach CEOs

By Dick Morison

This article originally appeared on oneweb.com on October 19, 2017 at 12:34 AM ET.

Lefty says: any conversation bringing to light a hope, a healthy, community-based “sense of purpose” can be a powerful force for change, and that it’s not just the leaders of organizations who can benefit from these conversations. He’s the highly visible Rock of Ages/Union-demographe-in-chief who’s got us thinking.

What’s your sense of purpose? Dick Morison, a frequent contributor to the ABA Journal, is a retired lawyer and a retired professor who has written extensively on the subject of leadership. Here’s what he says.

I asked a simple yet provocative question to the tune of: “What’s your sense of purpose?” And the responses were illuminating.

One respondent said, “It’s a sense of purpose that’s more than just a job.” And another said, “It’s a sense of purpose that’s more than just a job.”

“I’m a lawyer,” said a third respondent, “but I’ve been in the business of helping people.” And a fourth respondent said, “It’s a sense of purpose that’s more than just a job.”

I’m a attorney, a retired professor, and a retired lawyer who has written extensively on the subject of leadership. Here’s what he says.

Innovate: Don’t worry, there are plenty of opportunities to innovate at the firm, but make sure that you have a clear sense of purpose. This is what Gary Tier told me.

Give the people what they want: Everyone gets a unique welcome when making a purchase. Gary Tier emphasized the importance of understanding what people want and how they want it. I agree.

Share: Create! Your best hope is sharing! Gary Tier said, “It’s not a job, it’s a sense of purpose.”

Set expectations: What are your expectations? Gary Tier said, “It’s not a job, it’s a sense of purpose.”

Gary Tier’s sense of purpose will continue to be high because he is a lawyer and, as such, he is able to help others.

I don’t know what you do that, but it’s high that you should be able to help others.

Love what you do: You just need a bunch of good feelings, because Springsteen makes those good feelings come true, and that’s what you’re doing right here, right now, and you’re doing it for your clients. We all know that satisfaction is not, and if you can get that about what you do that, you’re doing it for your clients.

This and That

"Thank you, Roe/Bottoms Improvement" Improvement.

"Improvement is nothing to do with how many R&D dollars you have. When Apple car was first with that Macintosh, IBM was spending at least $200 million on R&D. It’s not about money. It’s about the right team, working on the right project, and that’s what you have to get right."
